Election 2016 The Year We Gave Up: A Coloring Book For Upset Voters

Synopsis

The 2016 Presidential Campaign cycle has been a surreal roller coaster ride that may ultimately end with the election of America's first reality show Commander in Chief. The race for the White House has become such a sideshow we now find ourselves debating the validity of private email servers and whether or not a candidate's hand size should sway voters' intentions. While the two major parties endlessly debate which candidate is ready to lead the free world, perhaps we can all get together and agree that the soothing power of coloring is the unifying force that can deliver us from the unfortunate reality that is American politics. Or perhaps coloring can just help relieve the feeling of helplessness that permeates our soul. Features 26 coloring pages.

Customer Reviews

Todd and Dave are some of the funniest and most original men I've ever met. Todd is a genius when it comes to illustrating. This coloring book taps into a great kind of pessimistic humor, and an understanding that sometimes you just need to chill and chuckle in even the most dire of political situations.
